ABSTRACT

This document presents a variety of resources for students to use in preparing class presentations and historical research projects on the history of psychology. The resources pertain to historical figures in the field of psychology. Many of the references included in this bibliography are annotated and the names of the psychologists contained within most of books are listed as well. The first section of the bibliography lists four indexes to autobiographies and biographies of noted psychologists. The next section focuses on autobiographical references and includes references and/or annotations for both monograph- and book-length autobiographies. This section is followed by a section on biographical references. Included are sources for biographical sketches (1-2 paragraphs in length) of psychologists, as well as references and/or annotations for both monograph- and book-length biographies. A list of 4 necrology references which contain the death dates for 638 psychologists is also included. The document concludes with a list of bibliographic references on individual psychologists.

Overview

While teaching a history of psychology class during the last several years, I identified the following resources for student use. Students can use these resources to prepare class presentations and historical research projects. Students have commented on how interesting history can be when they get to know the historical figures in a personal way.

The sources identified in this guide are not exclusive. They constitute those references I have located in and ordered for the university's library. I got the idea of submitting this list to ERIC/CAS after a colleague asked for suggestions to order for his college's library. His response to my list was so favorable I concluded that others might find the list as useful.

Two features of this listing should prove helpful to teachers, scholars, and students of the history of psychology. I have annotated many of the references. In addition, I have listed the names of the psychologists contained within most of the books. Such information should facilitate retrieval

Indexes to Autobiographies and Biographies

Benjamin, L. T., Jr. (1980). Women in psychology: Biography and autobiography. Psychology of Women Quarterly, 5, 140-144.

(The source above contains almost 100 autobiographical and biographical references about 50 women who have contributed significantly to psychology.)

Benjamin, L. T., Jr., Pratt, R., Watlington, D., Aaron, L., Bonar, T., Fitzgerald, S., Franklin, M., Jimenez, B., & Lester, R. (1989). History of American psychology in notes and news, 1883-1945: An index to journal sources Mill Wood, NY: Kraus International Publications.

(The source above contains an index of information from the six journals (Science, American Journal of Psychology, Psychological Review, Psychological Bulletin, Journal of Philosophy, Psychology, and Scientific Method, and Journal of Applied Psychology) that were most important sources of news and notes. The news and notes typically announced such things as the founding of new laboratories, new societies, new journals, travel of psychologists, deaths, new appointments, changes in journal editorships, promotions, lectures, fellowships, elections, leaves of absence, grants, meetings, and awards.)

Benjamin, L. T., Jr., & Shlossman, W. (1983). Biographical sketches of eminent psychologists: A selected bibliography. JSAS Catalog of Selected documents in Psychology, 13, 1, (Ms. no. 2525)

(The source above contains more than 1,000 autobiographical and biographical references to about 400 prominent psychologists from 1850 to 1983. It includes and extends the two sources preceding it.)

Sokal, M. M., & Rafail, P. A. (1982). A guide to manuscript collections in the history of psychology and related areas Millwood, NY: Kraus International Publications.

(This source identifies the locations of papers of more than 200 psychologists.)
